In the image you can see Aller et retour. Dans la musique comme dans l'amour (Back and forth. In music as in love), a sculpture by the artist Carlos Pazos, made in 2008.

The artist has created this unusual sculpture using discarded objects that he has found; the technique he applies is called objet trouvé.

Notice that the sculpture is composed of a collection of very different objects that any of us could find at home: a table, a pile of books that forms one leg for the table, a guitar, a pool ball, and a kind of train carriage which itself contains a toy leg. By creating this work of art, the objects are no longer simply objects, because the artist has transformed them into an artwork.

Each and every one of them has its own special value and recounts stories and memories to us. CARLOS PAZOS loves to keep and preserve objects that have some meaning in order to transform them into art.

And you, do you have an object at home that is very special?

Perhaps a photograph of a member of your family, your favourite toy or a book that you love reading? Now you can collect together all these objects and transform them into a work of art while creating a very original sculpture!

Materials:

Look for objects at home that are special to you, anything counts.
